THE FINAL WARRIOR III

Long long ago, when people still believed in myths, there appeared a ruler of this world. His name was the Great Hurricane. All kinds of fierce warriors called themselves brave and challenged him. And Hurricane's rule continued. After Dean the Great was defeated, there was a man who was watching him. "Perfectly equipped. Even a great hero with perfect experience, intelligence, strength, and magic was defeated." The only way to beat the Great Hurricane in a single game was to equip the cursed item. Of course, there was always the option of making friends, training them, and having them fight with you. But it is in one-on-one battles that the true man's romance lies. I equipped myself with the Claws of Destruction, the Mask of the Serpent, the Double-Edged Armor, and the Incapacitating Shield, and headed off to the Great Hurricane, alone. All of these items were cursed, and I feared that if I had companions, they would become confused and fight amongst themselves. However, he could maintain a sense of normalcy as long as he was equipped with the items alone. And even if they should get out of control, there would be no problem if they were alone. As long as I had the cursed item, it was imperative that I remember the spell of de-remembering. To get to that level, I fought hard against small fry enemies in the first town, Arya, and as I gained experience, I was taught spells by a master wizard. It was all through hard work. What, even a neat can become a sage and master all spells by gaining experience? That's new to me. Wise men can learn all spells, but their disadvantage is that they level up slowly. When I was in the stage of learning the spells of removal and return, I equipped myself with cursed items and attacked the castle of the hurricane. The Demon King, Saturn, was crushed, the Monster Priest, Snakehead, crushed, Saturn Brother, crushed, and the Zombie Sisters, crushed. All thanks to the power of the Claws of Destruction, the defensive strength of the Serpent's Mask, the ability of the Double-Edged Armor to repel attacks, and the high magic defense of the Shield of Incapacitating Force. It was brilliant of you to venture into my castle by yourself! The hurricane itself will deal with you! Will you join forces with me?" Of course I refused this promise, and using my lucky skull, I stripped off the Great Hurricane's dark robe. -The battle with the Great Hurricane began - I used my Claws of Destruction to challenge the Great Hurricane to a fight. My attack surely caught the Hurricane in the body, but I could not damage it. All your equipment is cursed! A direct attack will almost always miss!" The Great Hurricane used a great fire spell. He managed to guard it with the face of the giant serpent, but it took damage. The Great Hurricane cast another great windmill spell with a quick attack, a specialty of the great demon king. I guarded against this attack. You can't defeat me just by being on the defensive. The Great Hurricane used the Final Word, or Death spell. I've been waiting for this moment. Magic Depths Return! Everything was over. The Great Hurricane destroyed himself under the Return spell, which repelled all previous attacks and spells. I made sure the Great Hurricane was down, cast a spell of expulsion, and all the cursed items took off. I then used the chimera wings, or reroute spell, and returned to the city of Arya. Later, I heard a rumor that a castle of the Dragon Goddess had been discovered at the end of a hidden cave. It was an extra dungeon. Rumor had it that if you could fight the Dragon God and win within 15 minutes, he would give you an H-book. Of course, I didn't challenge him. I had already gotten rid of all the cursed and most powerful items, and I had heard from my brother, who had cleared the Final Warrior, that the book that the Dragon God was going to give me was a hard-boiled book. And so the real legend begins.

The GUIDED NEAT

I was of the belief that even a neat could become a sage after years of experience.

In fact, after many, many years of training, I had to become a neat.

And today, I finally had the opportunity to change careers.

Of course, I changed my job to a wise man.

But an unexpected situation awaited me.

I had to start all over again from level 1.

It takes time to become a real great sage.

Sure, I am a sage by profession.

However, it takes longer to level up compared to other professions.

At the very least, I want to master movement spells, escape spells, and recovery spells.

The only profession in which one can become a sage without the Book of Enlightenment is the neat. That is the neat.

It is true that it is the truth of the world, but there is a hard requirement to start over from level 1.

But, my friends said to me, “If you start with us from on-the-job training, you can become a playmaker. We can start with on-the-job training together.”
