A newspaper is showing a photograph of an aged Japanese politician with glasses.

The title of the article is “Kickback”.

The article says, “The politician took bribes and bought votes. Five hundred million dollar has come to light. The sum total”

(PHOTOREALISTIC, OIL PAINTING)

An aged Japanese leader with brown eyes is holding a wad of bills in his hand and is standing in an antique room with a teak desk and with a wall plaque showing the letters of “Kickback”. The leader is grinning and is wearing a black suit and glasses.

Another middle-aged Japanese politician in a dark suit is standing next to the leader and is holding a bag that has been filled with bills.

(OIL PAINTING, IMPRESSIONISM, OIL PASTEL, ART DECO)

A middle-aged Japanese man with brown eyes in a gray suit is smiling and is standing at the front door of a house in a town.

The Japanese man is holding a bunch of bills in his hand and is giving the bunch to a middle-aged woman with brown eyes in a dress.

The woman is smiling.

A ballot box in a Japanese polling station.

A woman in a casual dress is holding a thousand-yen bill in his hand and is putting the bill into the ballot box.

(CLOSE UP, PHOTOREALISTIC, OIL PAINTING)

An aged Japanese man with brown eyes and with glasses in a dark grey suit is standing at an entrance of a building and is shouting “I got elected by buying votes. If you object to my action, say so at once! I’m, I’m, I’m the rule.” The Japanese man got mad.

There are reporters and cameramen of the press around the Japanese man. The logotype of “KICKBACK” has been printed on each of the reporters’ clothes.
